The Frederick W. Thomas Chair for the Interdisciplinary Study of Law and Language was established through the generosity of the O'Connor & Hannan law firm and the friends and colleagues of Frederick W. Thomas. During his 49 years in the practice of law and 29 years with O'Connor & Hannan, Mr. Thomas was well known for his expertise in the field of law and is especially remembered for his love of language. The purpose of the Frederick W. Thomas Chair, which serves both the Law School and the College of Liberal Arts, is to promote interdisciplinary teaching and scholarship as it pertains to the relationship between law and language. It is awarded to scholars with a national reputation in law and disciplines in the liberal arts.
